cancer, which have a much better outlook than the deadly melanoma. However, I also diagnosed more melanomas this summer than in previous years." Dr. Perri attributes this increase in cancer to an increasing number of Montgomery County residents engaging in outdoor activities and not adequately protecting themselves from the sun. "It is important to enjoy outdoor activities but adhering to practices that limit UV (ultraviolet) exposure is crucial. I recommend a sunscreen of at least SPF 30 that covers both UVA and UVB adequately such as those in the Neutrogena or Aveeno lines. It is just as important to re-apply the sunscreens every two hours as chemical sunscreens breakdown as they dissipate the UV they are absorbing and are essentially ineffective after two hours. Also, physical UV blockers such as broad brimmed hats, sunglasses with UV blocking capabilities, and clothing that is loose fitting but has a tight weave with a UPF rating (similar to an SPF rating for sunscreen) are very important in decreasing UV exposure. Finally, avoiding the peak hours

Dr. Perri encountered many patients with skin cancer from the powerful Texas sun in his medical training at Baylor College of Medicine and The University of Texas Medical Branch where he served as Chief Resident of Dermatology prior to joining Sadler Clinic. Dr. Perri established as one of his primary missions the early detection of skin cancer and prior to his arrival in Montgomery County, it was not uncommon to wait several months to almost a year for an appointment with a board certified dermatologist. Observing the need for immediate access to dermatologic care, Dr. Perri opened clinics in both Conroe and The Woodlands and extended his weekday hours from 8AM to 8PM as well as having Saturday morning clinic hours. Dr. Perri has been practicing in Montgomery Country just over three years and in that time has rapidly become regarded as one of Houston's leading dermatologists. After joining Sadler Clinic in 2008, he was recently appointed the Chief of Dermatology and H Magazine named him one of the Top Doctors in Houston for 2011. Recently, he was named one of H Magazine's Top 100 Professionals in Houston.
